A special edition of Lunch With Books at the Ohio County Public Library
Wheeling, WV

HOSTED BY
WEST VIRGINIA POET LAUREATE
MARC HARSHMAN

JUNE 8, 2021

Wheeling Poetry Series

PRESENTS
ANNA SMUCKER & BILL KING
Launched in September 2015, the “Wheeling Poetry Series” features readings by some of the finest poets from our Appalachian region and beyond.

When he is available, Marc Harshman, the poet laureate of West Virginia, serves as host.

The series came about as a result of an ongoing conversation with Harshman, who felt that there was a need for a dependable venue in which to present major American poets reading and talking about their work here in West Virginia and more specifically here in Wheeling. Harshman had long lamented the loss of the James Wright Festival which had been held for many years in Wright’s home town of Martins Ferry, Ohio. “That annual event was a towering success,” Harshman explained, “lauded by poets across the U.S., and I see no reason why such a success cannot be replicated here in Wheeling. And some will remember that frequently some of the programming for the Wright festival was, in fact, held at various locations in Wheeling.”
Anna Egan Smucker is an award-winning author of nine books. No Star Nights, her memoir about growing up in the steel mill town of Weirton, WV won the International Reading Association Children's Book Award. Golden Delicious: A Cinderella Apple Story and Brother Giovanni’s Little Reward: How the Pretzel Was Born represented WV at the National Book Festival in D.C. Fallingwater: The Building of Frank Lloyd Wright’s Masterpiece, co-authored with Marc Harshman, garnered starred reviews and was named an Amazon Nonfiction Book of the Month. Recipient of a WV Arts Commission Artist Fellowship Award, her poems have been published in many anthologies and literary journals. Her first chapbook, titled Rowing Home, was published in 2019 by Finishing Line Press.

Visit annasmucker.com to learn more.
Impossibly thin, Angie’s pizzelles adorned cut-glass Christmas plates. Stalks of wheat embossed the center of the anise-flavored offerings she pressed on family, neighbors, friends.

Turning eighty, something snapped. Machine-like she churned them out until counters, cupboards, overflowed.

In the hot kitchen, her work, her body had grown articulate: Eat. Remember me.

—Anna Egan Smucker
SUMMER TWILIGHT ALONG THE OHIO

Behind the house, the iron handle of the pump hangs, a filigree of rust.
An iridescent beetle shoulders its way into the heart of Grandmother’s perfect rose.
In the pounded dirt floor of the foundry, Grandfather’s shattered finger has turned to dust.
A train slices the town in half.

Barefoot children ride down the hard wheels of the cannon mounted in the town square.
From the river, with the mist rising, sounds the lowing horn of a boat easing into the bend.

The metal box under his bed is empty.

Across the street at the skating rink, a mirrored globe hurls rainbows across the spinning floor.

— Anna Egan Smucker
Bill King grew up outside of Roanoke, Virginia in the Blue Ridge Mountains. He holds an M.A. in Creative Writing and a Ph.D. in Literature from the University of Georgia and teaches creative writing and literature at Davis & Elkins College in Elkins, WV where he has been awarded the Lois Latham Award for Teaching Excellence. He is a Pushcart Prize nominee, and his poetry has appeared in Kestrel, Appalachian Heritage, Still: The Journal, The Southern Poetry Anthology, Nau- gatuck River Review, and many other journals and anthologies. His first chapbook of poetry, from Finishing Line Press, is The Letting Go (2018). Dr. King has also published critical essays on two United States Poet Laureates, Robert Penn Warren (Mississippi Quarterly) and Robert Hass (Encyclopedia of American Literature).

Visit facebook.com/BillKingPoet to learn more.
This World Should Be Enough

Walking the rails, looking out—field daisies stand at attention, and in the darkest hole along this long hot stretch, a big trout rolls. It’s the flash, I guess, that catches my eye, and then the daisies, until further below
a fierce-headed merganser zagging up current with six behind makes me stop: Lord, I know that this is it.
This world should be enough. But the blue pulls my eyes skyward, then, and I am rising above a man with everything to lose:
he’s looking downriver at a thin thread of water,
lit like a slow-burning fuse.

— Bill King
Along the Staunton-Parkersburg Turnpike

The jonquil, buried forever
it must have seemed, in darkness, now rise like small spears
through moss and maple leaf.
Even after the dinner bell
and shouts of children dimmed, even as the old house fell and its good boards were trucked away,
the outline of little suns
continued to mark where the front door opened like a mouth to the mountains draped in early morning fog.
Come late summer,
where corn once marched toward the deep green wood,
the joepye and ironweed will reign as tall as farm boys waving as they go off to war—
not knowing, yet,
that they’re not coming back.

— Bill King
The Wheeling Poetry Series opener featured the poet laureate of Kentucky, George Ella Lyon, who appeared at Lunch With Books at the Ohio County Public Library on September 29, 2015.

The author of four books of poetry, a novel, a memoir, a short story collection, and thirty-seven books for young readers, Lyon read from her collection, Many-Storied House.

Originally from the mountains of Kentucky, George Ella holds a PhD in English from Indiana University, where she studied with poet Ruth Stone. She has taught writing on many campuses and spoken at hundreds of schools, libraries, and conferences throughout the country.

---

STEVE SCAFIDI

Steve Scafidi, the featured guest at the second Wheeling Poetry Series program on April 26, 2016, read Autumn Begins in Martins Ferry Ohio by his favorite poet, James Wright. “Wright wrote poems that endure,” Scafidi said. “His poems move me—they helped me live when I was younger and they still do.” From his own poems, Scafidi read This Page, written for his late grandmother, The Coin, a poem in which he imagines Abraham Lincoln’s son Robert carrying the first Lincoln penny in his pocket, and Song for Sunday Morning, a poem he dedicated to fathers everywhere.

Scafidi, who earned his MFA in creative writing at Arizona State University, lives in Summit Point, WV.

His writing has appeared in Harvard Review, Mid-American Review, RATTLE, River Styx, North Dakota Quarterly and many other journals. He earned his law degree from the West Virginia University College of Law, received a fellowship from the West Virginia Commission on the Arts, and spent five years in West Virginia prison system (the basis for his latest book of poems).

MAGGIE ANDERSON

Maggie Anderson, the featured Wheeling Poetry Series guest October 4, 2016, is the author of four books of poetry, including Windfall: New and Selected Poems, A Space Filled with Moving, and Cold Comfort.

Her awards include two fellowships from the National Endowment for the Arts, fellowships from the Ohio, West Virginia, and Pennsylvania Councils on the Arts, and the Ohioana Library Award for contributions to the literary arts in Ohio.

The founding director of the Wick Poetry Center and of the Wick Poetry Series of the Kent State University Press, Anderson is Professor Emerita of English at Kent State University and lives in Asheville, NC. Her new collection of poems, Dear All, was released September 2017, by Four Way Books in New York.
Our featured guest on May 9, 2017, Mitchell Douglas read from his poetry collection blak *al-fə bet* (Persea Books, 2013). Mitchell Douglas is a founding member of the Affrilachian Poets, a Cave Canem fellow, and Poetry Editor for PLUCK!: the Journal of Affrilachian Arts & Culture. A professor of English at Indiana University-Purdue University Indianapolis (IUPUI), his second poetry collection blak *al-fə bet* was winner of the 2011 Lexi Rudnitsky/Editor’s Choice Award. His debut collection, Cooling Board: A Long-Playing Poem, was a runner-up for the 2007 Stan and Tom Wick Poetry Prize. In 2010, Cooling Board was nominated for an NAACP Image Award in the Outstanding Literary Work-Poetry.

Diane Gilliam grew up in Columbus, Ohio, daughter of parents who were part of the post-war Appalachian outmigration, from Mingo County W. Va. and Johnson County Kentucky. Gilliam’s first book, One of Everything (2003), tells the stories of four generations of women in her family, beginning on Stepp Mountain in eastern Kentucky and ending in a shopping mall in Akron, Ohio.

Her second book, Kettle Bottom (2004), a Pushcart Prize winner and Ohioana Library Association Book of the Year in Poetry, showcases the voices of people living in the coal camps at the time of the 1920-21 West Virginia Mine Wars. Gilliam was awarded the 2008 Chaffin Award for Appalachian Writing. She earned a PhD from Ohio State and MFA from Warren Wilson University.

Diane Gilliam was the featured Wheeling Poetry Series guest August 1, 2017.
James Harms, was our featured guest on October 3, 2017. The founding director of the MFA Program in Creative Writing at WVU, Harms the author of the poetry collections Rowing with Wings, Comet Scar, After West, Freeways and Aqueducts, Quarters, The Joy Addict and Modern Ocean, and What to Borrow, What to Steal, a limited fine press edition, East of Avalon, as well as several poetry chapbooks. He has received a National Endowment for the Arts Fellowship, three Pushcart Prizes, the PEN/Revson Fellowship, and fellowships from the WV and PA Arts Commissions, as well as residencies at Yaddo and the MacDowell Colony. His work has appeared in Poetry, The American Poetry Review, Oxford American, and many other journals.

An astounding writer and teacher, Mary B. Moore has published three major collections and won four poetry contests in just the past two years. Her life’s work has been hailed by some of the finest poets in America.

The featured Wheeling Poetry Series guest April 10, 2018, Moore’s latest poetry book, Amanda and the Man Soul, was selected by Dorianne Laux for the 2017 EMRYS award. Other recently published poetry books include her second full-length collection Flicker (Broad-kill River Press, 2016), winner of the 2016 Dogfish Head Poetry Award judged by Carol Frost, Baron Wormser, and Jan Beatty; and Eating the Light (Sable Books, 2016) chosen by Allison Joseph for the 2016 chapbook contest. The Book of Snow, a full-length collection, came out in 1998 from Cleveland State University Press. She won the Second Place Award, in 2017, in Nimrod’s Pablo Neruda Poetry Contest.
On July 17th, 2018, the Wheeling Poetry Series hosted an astounding writer and teacher, Ron Houchin. In the past two years alone, Houchin has published three major collections and won four poetry contests. His life’s work has been hailed by some of the finest poets in America. He was awarded the Appalachian book of the year in poetry in 2004 and the Weatherford Award in poetry in 2013 for his collection, The Man Who Saws Us In Half, LSU Press.

As a special bonus, the distinguished author and poet, A.E. Stringer, joined Houchin. Stringer taught writing and literature at Marshall University for nearly twenty-five years. The A.E. Stringer Visiting Writers Series at Marshall is named in his honor. He has published three major collections of poetry including Channel Markers from the legendary Wesleyan Poetry Series and most recently, Late Breaking, 2013, Salmon Poetry Publishing.

One of America’s most distinguished poets, Ed Ochester, along with the award-winning and prolific poet, Judith Vollmer, kicked off the fourth season of the Wheeling Poetry Series on October 9th, 2019. Ochester’s book, Sugar Run Road, was published by Autumn House Press. He is the editor of the University of Pittsburgh Press Poetry Series and for many years was a member of the core faculty of the Bennington MFA Writing Seminars. He was formerly director of the Writing Program at the University of Pittsburgh.

Vollmer is the author of five full-length books of poetry, including most recently, The Apollonia Poems, awarded the Four Lakes Poetry Prize of the University of Wisconsin Press. She teaches in the Drew University MFA Program in Poetry & Poetry in Translation.

A recent poem was selected for Scribner’s Best American Poetry 2017. Hodgen’s latest book, The Lord of Everywhere, was released in early September 2019, also from the University of Washington.

Hodgen was the featured author at the Wheeling Poetry Series April 23, 2019.

John Hopenthaler was the featured guest at the Wheeling Poetry Series, August 13, 2019.

For nine years he served as Personal Assistant to American novelist, essayist, book editor, and college professor, Toni Morrison. He received his MFA in Poetry Writing from Virginia Commonwealth University and is an English professor at East Carolina University.
Hailed by Michael Heaton, features reporter for The Cleveland Plain Dealer as "America's Greatest Living Poet," George Bilgere can count among his other admirers Garrison Keillor and former poet laureate Billy Collins, who has described him as "a welcome breath of fresh American air."

A professor of English at John Carroll University, Bilgere has published six collections of poetry, including Imperial (2014); The White Museum (2010), which was awarded the Autumn House Poetry Prize; Haywire (2006), which won the May Swenson Poetry Award; and The Good Kiss (2002), which was selected by Collins to win the University of Akron Poetry Award. Other awards include the Midland Authors Award and a Pushcart Prize. Bilgere was the featured author at the Wheeling Poetry Series October 22, 2019.

She holds fellowships from Stanford University's Wallace Stegner program, the Fine Arts Work Center in Provincetown, and the Severinghaus Beck Fund for Study at Vilnius Yiddish Institute. Originally from Youngstown, Ohio, she is a PhD candidate in English and Creative Writing at The University of Tennessee, where she served as an editor of Grist: A Journal of the Literary Arts and writes about the intersection of labor, diaspora, and gender in the Rust Belt.
Our guest for the November 11, 2020 Lunch With Books Livestream Wheeling Poetry Series, Erin Murphy is the author of eight collections of poetry, including Human Resources (forthcoming from Salmon Poetry in 2021) and Too Much of This World (Mammoth Books, 2008), winner of the Anthony Piccione Poetry Prize, and Science of Desire (Word Poetry, 2004), a finalist for the Paterson Poetry Prize for the best poetry book of 2004. Her awards include the Dorothy Sargent Rosenberg Poetry Prize and the Foley Poetry Award, among others. Her work has been featured on Garrison Keillor’s The Writer’s Almanac, and has appeared in numerous journals and anthologies. Murphy is Professor of English and creative writing at Penn State Altoona.

Cameron Barnett’s poetry explores the complexity of race and the body for a black man in today’s America. His work has been nominated for a 2016 Pushcart Prize, the 82nd Annual Anisfield-Wolf Book Awards, and the Rebekah Johnson Bobbitt Prize. He is the recipient of a 2019 Investing in Professional Artists Grant Program, a partnership of The Pittsburgh Foundation and The Heinz Endowments; he is also the 2019 Emerging Artist Awardee for the Carol R. Brown Creative Achievement Awards, co-sponsored by The Pittsburgh Foundation and The Heinz Endowments. He is the author of The Drowning Boy’s Guide to Water, winner of the Autumn House Press 2017 Rising Writer Contest, and finalist for the 49th NAACP Image Awards for Outstanding Literary Work in Poetry. Cameron joins us for the sixteenth program in the Wheeling Poetry series via Lunch With Books Livestream, March 9, 2021.
"I have a great faith in poetry to refocus in us what it means to be human, and with every passing year I feel an ever greater need to be reminded about what it is that we hold in common as men and women who value beauty and the kind of meaning revealed in artistic expression. I am not embarrassed to continue to quote as immensely relevant William Carlos Williams' adage that:

'It is difficult to get the news from poems yet men die miserably every day for lack of what is found there.'

In a political season that seems more sad and pathetic than ever before, perhaps the news that may be found in poetry will hold a brightness, a freshness more useful than the sound-bites from talking heads reporting on the doings of the millionaires and corporate figure heads dominating what currently passes for news here in America."

-Marc Harshman, West Virginia Poet Laureate
Carrie Conners & Jacob Strautmann will be our guests for our next Wheeling Poetry Series, July 27, 2021. Originally from West Virginia, Carrie Conners first poetry collection, Luscious Struggle was selected as a 2020 Paterson Poetry Prize Finalist. Her second collection, Species of Least Concern, was a finalist of the Main Street Rag Poetry Book Award and will be published in the winter of 2021-22. Awarded a 2018 Massachusetts Poetry Fellowship, Marshall County native Jacob Strautmann’s debut book of poems The Land of the Dead Is Open for Business is currently available from Four Way Books.
Wheeling Poetry Series

www.ohiocountylibrary.org